Shoppers Are In The Holiday Spirit With Strong Spending

Reports indicate that Black Friday sales were around $10 billion, driven by online sales which rose about 10% year-over-year; in-store traffic declined compared to last year.

Adobe has reported that Cyber Monday spending exceeded $13 billion. Holiday sales so far are above the spending levels from last year. This should not come as a surprise as the labor market remains strong. Last week's November employment data indicated jobs growth is still strong. Strong jobs are leading to strong consumer spending leading to the U.S. economy estimated growth rate just above 3% for 4Q24.

Cyclicals Are Performing Well In A Stronger Economy

With a strong economy the cyclicals side of the equity market is performing strongly with a multi-year breakout versus defensive sectors. This breakout gives us high confidence that the equity market remains in a strong bull tape.

The True Definition Of The Santa Claus Rally

A Santa Claus rally is a calendar effect that involves a rise in stock prices during the last 5 trading days in December and the first 2 trading days in the following January. According to the 2019 Stock Trader's Almanac, the stock market has risen 1.3% on average during these 7 trading days. This has worked historically 76% of the time. The Santa Claus rally was first recorded by Yale Hirsch in his Stock Trader's Almanac in 1972. So, we expect more upside this month for the S&P 500. Our outlook for 2025 is for the equity market to continue its bull charge and reach a range of 7200-7400. Now the bulls may buck from time to time but we believe the trend will remain up.

Software Takes The Lead

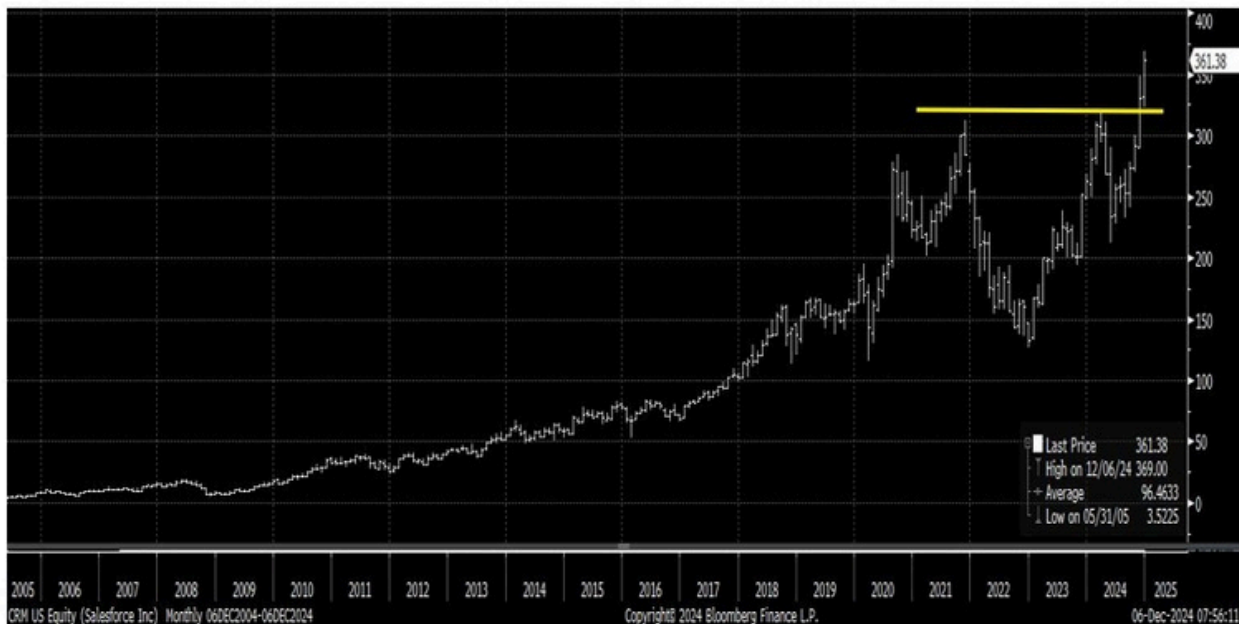

In our Year Ahead Outlook for 2025 we highlighted that we believe the Technology leadership was shifting from Semiconductors to Software. The iShares Tech Software ETF (IGV) has made a multi-year breakout confirming its strong leadership.

What's Old Is New: Tesla & ARK Innovation ETFs On The Move Again

Two stocks that have corrected sharply and have not performed are back. Tesla (TSLA) and ARK Innovation ETF (ARKK). This tells us this is still a risk-on market, and these stocks represent Artificial Intelligence investments in play.

The Money Mountain Continues To Grow

This is plenty of cash on the sidelines with the ICI Money Market Funds growing to nearly $7 Trillion. Remember equity markets don't peak until all investors are in and the market is leveraged. We have a very long runway left for stocks to climb with all this cash.

Bitcoin Gets A Bump When Fed Chair Powell Says BTC Like Gold

Last week the Federal Reserve (Fed) Chair Jermone Powell compared Bitcoin (BTC) as being similar to Gold and the market went wild attempting to clear the $100,000 level. Big round levels typically take a few attempts to clear. If BTC technically clears $100,000, the next technical objective is $113,000. If this level is reached, the next technical move is $150,000. Historically, BTC outperforms for three years in a row and then goes into what is known as the crypto winter – a bear correction which historically is extremely deep nearing 80%. BTC has outperformed for two years and 2025 looks to be shaping up another bull move.

Will It Be Grinch Or Santa For Inflation?

This week we get more inflation data from the Consumer Price Index (CPI) and the Producer Price Index (PCE). The markets are trying to gage if the Fed will cut interest rates one last time this year on December 18th at the FOMC Fed meeting. The market is so far expecting an additional 25 basis point cut at this meeting after already lowering rates by 75 basis points. This would reduce the level of restriction by 100 basis points within the year since September. This we believe would be bullish for the equity market in 2025.
